

Market commentary

The portfolio posted a positive return in February. Barclays, Currys and Stellantis were positive contributors to performance, while Anglo American, International Distribution Services (IDS) and WPP were detractors from performance.

February saw two of the holdings being approached for a possible takeover, Currys and Direct Line Group. We believe it is further evidence of the issue that the largest market participants in the UK have been allocating away from UK equities, which are close to all-time low valuations, and therefore should have the potential to offer attractive returns. In our view, this has resulted in pockets of the UK equity market being valued significantly below the true value of the businesses which, we believe, has led to a number of overseas corporate buyers stepping in to take advantage of the depressed valuations of UK equities.

Elsewhere, Barclays performed well following the release of its latest results in which they announced plans to return at least £10 billion of capital to shareholders over the next two years (Barclays, 20 February 2024). Stellantis' share price rose following their results in which they announced a €3bn share buyback and reported record sales (Bloomberg, Stellantis, 15 February 2024).

Anglo American was a detractor from performance as the company reported a fall in profit and lowered its dividend (Bloomberg, Anglo American, 22 February 2024). WPP's share price fell following results; the company said revenue declined due to lower spending by technology clients (Bloomberg, WPP, 22 February 2024). IDS was also a detractor from performance. UK equities continue to be valued at a significant discount to global equities generally. Accordingly, we believe that, notwithstanding the shorter-term uncertainties, UK equities are priced to offer relatively attractive returns into the future.
